

Cancellation of Voter Registrations for Not Voting in the Last Election

Colón Marrero v. Conty Pérez
(Carmen Consuelo Cerezo, D.P.R. 3:12-cv-1749)

Five days before the September 17, 2012, voter registration deadline in Puerto Rico for the 2012 general election, a voter filed a federal complaint in the District of Puerto Rico, challenging the cancellation of her registration because she had not voted in the 2008 general election.<sup>1</sup> On the following day, she filed a motion for a preliminary injunction.<sup>2</sup>

On September 18, Judge Carmen Consuelo Cerezo denied the injunction.<sup>3</sup> On the one hand, Judge Cerezo determined that the plaintiff's statutory grounds for requested relief did not support such relief:<sup>4</sup> the National Voter Registration Act (NVRA)<sup>5</sup> did not apply to Puerto Rico as it does to the states, and the Help America Vote Act (HAVA)<sup>6</sup> did not afford the plaintiff a right of action. On the other hand, "No justification has been advanced . . . as to why [the plaintiff waited] until four (4) days before expiration of the voter registration deadline in Puerto Rico to seek a preliminary injunction . . . ."<sup>7</sup>

An appeal was heard on October 11, and the court of appeals determined that the plaintiff had demonstrated a likelihood of success on the merits.<sup>8</sup> Because, however, "the parties have made widely differing claims with respect to the feasibility of granting the request for preliminary relief," the court of appeals returned the case to the district court for an evidentiary hearing.<sup>9</sup>

On October 15, from 9:15 in the morning until 9:00 at night,<sup>10</sup> and then again on October 16,<sup>11</sup> Judge Cerezo held an evidentiary hearing.<sup>12</sup> On October 17, she certified findings of fact to the court of appeals.<sup>13</sup> A key finding was, “The total number of voters who remain inactive at this time for not having participated in the 2008 general elections is 330,902.”<sup>14</sup>

On October 18, by a vote of two to one, the court of appeals “concluded that serious feasibility issues preclude the entry of the relief sought by plaintiff-appellant. Hence, the decision of the district court denying the request for a preliminary injunction is affirmed.”<sup>15</sup>

The court of appeals issued its opinion on November 2.<sup>16</sup> It agreed that the NVRA does not apply to Puerto Rico.<sup>17</sup> Although the court determined that HAVA protected the plaintiff’s right to vote for Puerto Rico’s representative in Congress, its resident commissioner, “it would be improvident to grant plaintiff’s requested relief with only eighteen days remaining before the general election.”<sup>18</sup>

On Saturday, November 3, three days before the election, Judge Cerezo issued an order under the All Writs Act<sup>19</sup> that voters whose registrations had been canceled for not voting be permitted to cast provisional ballots.<sup>20</sup> On Monday, the court of appeals, again on a two-to-one vote, “vacated forthwith” Judge Cerezo’s order as again improvident.<sup>21</sup>

After additional litigation, Judge Cerezo ruled on January 30, 2015, that Puerto Rico’s provision for canceling a voter registration for failure to vote in a general election violated HAVA’s registration protection absent notice and a failure to vote in two consecutive general elections.<sup>22</sup> On February 1, 2016,

Cancellation of Voter Registrations for Not Voting in the Last Election

the court of appeals affirmed Judge Cerezo's ruling, again agreeing that Puerto Rico is bound by HAVA but not the NVRA.<sup>23</sup>
