  Appendix: Help America Vote Act 36
Introduction

The Help America Vote Act of 2002 (HAVA)\(^1\) was Congress’s reaction to issues that arose during the 2000 presidential election and the ensuing controversial Florida recount.\(^2\) President George W. Bush signed HAVA into law on October 29, 2002.

HAVA includes standards for provisional ballots, which help prevent the consequences of erroneous purges of voter registration rolls. Instead of turning away eligible voters, polls permit those whose registrations are in question to cast provisional ballots that are counted if it turns out that they were eligible to vote.\(^3\) HAVA also sets minimum standards for voting equipment used in federal elections.\(^4\)

Basic Requirements

A principal reason for HAVA was “to establish minimum election administration standards for States and units of local government with responsibility for the administration of Federal elections.”\(^5\) The Act promoted improvements in election procedures through a grant program, an independent commission, and a set of minimum standards for federal elections.\(^6\)

Title I: Grant Program

Title I provided funds to states to improve election administration and replace outdated voting systems. States qualifying for the funds had to ensure that all punch card and lever voting machines were replaced by any 2004 election, although Title I allowed a good cause waiver extending the deadline, originally to 2006 elections, later to the March 2008 primaries, and finally to the 2010 general election.

Title II: Election Assistance Commission

Title II created a new federal agency, the Election Assistance Commission (EAC), to serve as a clearinghouse for information on federal election administration requirements. The EAC has four appointed members and can act only with the approval of three members. Its duties are to develop and adopt voluntary guidelines on provisional voting, statewide voter registration databases, and mail-in registration; to adopt voluntary guidelines on voting equipment; to conduct studies on election administration; and to research methods to improve access for voters with disabilities and those who are not proficient in English. HAVA does not give the EAC authority to “issue any rule, promulgate any regulation, or take any other action which imposes any requirement on any State or unit of local government.” HAVA required each state to develop a plan that explains how it will comply with HAVA requirements.

Title III: Requirements

Title III created minimum standards for states to follow in several key areas of election administration. Specifically, Title III contains minimum requirements for the following:

- voting systems (§ 301)
- provisional voting and required information for voters (§ 302)
- computerized state-wide voter registration lists (§ 303(a)) and
- requirements for first-time voters who register by mail (§ 303(b))

Section 301: Requirements for Voting Systems

Section 301 clarifies that it does not prohibit jurisdictions from using the same kind of voting equipment that they used in November 2000, as long as the equipment meets the general and basic requirements that the statute imposes on all voting systems. Section 301 required that all voting systems, by January 1, 2006, allow voters to verify their choices, provide voters with an opportunity to correct their choices before their votes are cast, and notify voters of overvotes. This is known as notice or second-chance technology. Jurisdictions using paper-based systems such as punch cards could meet this requirement with a voter education program on how to correct mistakes and the effect of over-voting. In addition, HAVA requires the following of all voting systems:

- They must have an audit capacity, and they must produce a permanent paper record that can be used for manual audits.
- They must accommodate people with disabilities and provide “the same opportunity for access and participation (including privacy and independence) as for other voters,” such as by providing at least one direct-record electronic unit or other accessible voting machine in each polling place.
- They must allow alternative-language access for people whose primary language is not English.

Section 302: Requirements for Provisional Ballotting and Voter Information

“Provisional voting allows citizens whose names do not, for whatever reason, appear on registration lists to cast a conditional ballot.” Although some states had used provisional ballots, nationwide use in federal elections was mandated for the first time by section 302(a) of HAVA, effective January 1, 2004. Section 302(a) provides that if an individual appears at a polling place and that individual’s name does not appear on the official list of eligible voters for that polling place or an election official asserts that the person is not eligible to vote, and if that individual declares through a written affirmation that he or she is “a registered voter in the jurisdiction” in which he or she wishes to vote and is “eligible to vote in that election,” then that individual has an automatic right to cast a provisional ballot. Officials are required to follow specific procedures under HAVA’s provisional voting provisions:

Notification. An individual whose name does not appear on the voter registration list must be notified that he or she is entitled to cast a provisional ballot.

Affirmation. In order to cast a provisional ballot, the voter must affirm that he or she is (a) registered in the jurisdiction and (b) eligible to vote in the election.

Transmittal. Poll workers must transmit the provisional ballot or the information in the affirmation to the appropriate state or local election official.

Counting. If the election official determines that the individual is eligible to vote, the provisional ballot should be counted.

Confirmation. Election officials must establish a free access system allowing provisional voters to ascertain whether or not their provisional ballots were counted and, if not, the reason why not.

As provided by section 303(b), first-time voters who registered by mail but who have not previously voted in federal elections and who do not present appropriate documentation must be allowed to cast a provisional ballot. Also effective January 1, 2004, section 302(b) requires the public posting of the following at each polling place on election day: a sample ballot, information about the hours the polling place would be open, .

Section 303(a): Requirements for Computerized Statewide Voter Registration

Effective January 1, 2004, but extendable for good cause to January 1, 2006, section 303(a)\textsuperscript{36} requires each state to establish a uniform, official, centralized, computerized, statewide voter registration list that must include the name and registration information for every registered voter within each state and assign a unique identifier to each registered voter.\textsuperscript{37} In addition, the list is to be coordinated with other agency databases within each state—specifically, records on felons and deaths—and accessible electronically by any election official in the state.\textsuperscript{38} HAVA also requires states to maintain the databases by requiring that states ensure that the name of each voter appears on the electronic lists, by eliminating the names of voters who are not registered, and by eliminating duplicate names.\textsuperscript{39} For new registration applicants, the application must contain the applicant’s driver’s license number, or the last four digits of the applicant’s Social Security number if the applicant does not have a driver’s license.\textsuperscript{40} If the applicant has neither, the state is to assign a unique identifying number to the applicant.\textsuperscript{41} States’ chief election officials are required to establish agreements with their state motor vehicle agencies to match the statewide voter regis-

Section 303(b): Identification Requirements for Voters Who Register by Mail

Section 303(b), 44 which became effective for the 2004 elections, establishes identification requirements for a narrow category of first-time voter who 45

- registers to vote in a jurisdiction by mail after January 1, 2003 46
- has not previously voted in the state in an election for federal office or has not previously voted in the jurisdiction, and the jurisdiction is in a state not having a section 303(a) statewide voter list 47
- has not provided a copy of photo identification or other proof of name and address at the time they mailed in their registration forms 48

At the time of voting for the first time in person, this voter must present either valid photo identification or a “current utility bill, bank statement, government check, paycheck, or other government document that shows the name and address of the voter.” If voting for the first time by mail, the voter must provide photocopies of these documents.

If the first-time voter does not present proper identification, the person must be allowed to cast a provisional ballot, which then must be verified according to the procedures in section 302 described above. HAVA refers to this procedure as fail-safe voting, which was established so that “citizens who do not bring the proper documentation will nevertheless have their votes counted, if they are in fact eligible to vote.” These requirements do not apply to individuals who are entitled to vote absentee under various federal laws such as the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act and the Voting Accessibility for the Elderly and Handicapped Act. In addition, a voter is exempt from the identification requirement if at the time of the mail registration the voter provides the voter’s driver’s license number or the last four digits of the voter’s Social Security number and the identification information is verified through the statewide registration database (i.e., the state is able to match that information with an existing state identification record bearing the same number, name, and date of birth as provided in the registration application).

Title IV: Enforcement

HAVA established two enforcement processes. Under section 401, the Attorney General may file a civil suit against a state seeking declaratory or injunctive relief to carry out the uniform and nondiscriminatory election technology and administration requirements that apply to all states under HAVA sections 301, 302, and 303.\textsuperscript{55} The Attorney General has delegated § 401 enforcement authority to the Voting Section of the Justice Department’s Civil Rights Division.\textsuperscript{56} In addition to litigation, the Justice Department enforces HAVA through educational campaigns, outlining requirements of HAVA, responding to inquiries from state and local officials about HAVA’s requirements, and maintaining a HAVA information page on the internet.\textsuperscript{57}

In order to receive HAVA funds from the federal government, section 402 requires states to implement a uniform and nondiscriminatory complaint procedure to address and rectify the complaints of citizens regarding the administration of federal elections.\textsuperscript{58} A state finding that there has been a violation “shall provide the appropriate remedy.”\textsuperscript{59} If the state fails to meet the 90-day deadline for addressing the complaint, the statute provides for a 60-day alternative dispute resolution procedure.\textsuperscript{60}

Enforcement of HAVA in Federal Courts

Enforcement of HAVA by the U.S. Department of Justice

Section 401 of HAVA assigns responsibility for bringing claims against states for failure to meet HAVA requirements to the Justice Department. As evidenced by a March 2003 letter of guidance to all states regarding implementation of HAVA provisions, and a December 2003 press release offering assistance to any state that “falls short of full implementation,” from the very beginning the Justice Department adopted a policy of reaching out and helping states to become compliant with HAVA through education campaigns and coordinated efforts before resorting to litigation. This approach has provided the Justice Department with the opportunity to determine whether a state simply failed to implement the HAVA mandates or whether the state suffered setbacks in implementation that could be addressed by the Justice Department and the EAC by providing the state with needed information and fund-management resources before taking enforcement actions. The Justice Department’s litigation history provides further evidence of this “litigation-as-the-last-resort” approach. Since January 1, 2004, the date that states were to be in compliance with HAVA’s requirements governing provisional voting, identification of mail-in voters, provision of voter information, and the establishment of accessible computerized statewide voter registration lists, the Justice Department’s Civil Rights Division brought only 12 cases in federal district courts against states for violation of one or more provisions of HAVA.66 Most of these cases were resolved by settlements.

Section 301 Violations
Alleged violations of section 301 included failure to comply with voting system standards, failure to ensure full access to voting for disabled voters, and failure to provide certain alternative language information.

United States v. Philadelphia (E.D. Pa. 2:06-cv-4592). The Justice Department filed a federal complaint against Philadelphia under the Voting Rights Act on October 13, 2006, complaining that the city was failing to accommodate Spanish-speaking and disabled voters.67 On October 25, the Department moved for a temporary restraining order requiring the appointment of observers.68 A three-judge court heard the motion on November 3—four days before the 2006 general election—and denied immediate relief.69 The court concluded that the Department had delayed too long in bringing its complaint and motion—it had known most of the relevant facts since July—and the Department’s case was weak.70 On April 26, 2007, the Department filed an amended complaint including HAVA and the National Voter Registration Act as additional authorities for mandated improvements in Philadelphia’s accommodation of Spanish-speaking and disabled voters. On the following day, the parties filed a stipulation to dismiss the action as settled.

United States v. Maine (D. Me. 1:06-cv-86). On July 28, 2006, the Justice Department filed a federal complaint alleging that Maine was violating HAVA section 301(a) by not adequately accommodating disabled voters and that Maine was violating both HAVA section 303(a) and the National Voter Registration Act by failing to maintain an adequate statewide voter registration list. With the complaint, the Department filed a proposed consent decree, which Judge John A. Woodcock Jr. signed on August 1. Judge Woodcock approved modifications to the schedule of compliance on October 27, 2006, and April 4, 2007. The consent decree expired on December 31, 2009, and Judge Woodcock determined that no further court oversight was necessary.

United States v. New York (N.D.N.Y. 1:06-cv-263). On March 1, 2006, the Justice Department filed a federal complaint against New York in the Northern District of New York for failure to comply with HAVA section 301 concerning voting mechanisms and failure to comply with HAVA section 303(a) concerning statewide voter registration lists. Three weeks later, Judge Gary L. Sharpe issued a preliminary injunction requiring New York to submit to the court a plan for compliance.\textsuperscript{79} New York’s compliance efforts remain underway.\textsuperscript{80}

\textit{Section 302 Violations}

Alleged violations of section 302 included failure to ensure provisional ballots were available and offered to voters, failure to post required information at polling places during federal elections, failure to provide information on the process of casting a provisional ballot, and failure to establish a free access system for voters to ascertain whether their provisional ballots were counted.

\textit{United States v. Fort Bend County} (S.D. Tex. 4:09-cv-1058). On April 9, 2009, the Justice Department filed a federal civil action in Houston, Texas, claiming that Fort Bend County was (1) violating HAVA by not providing voters with provisional ballots as required and (2) violating the Voting Rights Act by not adequately facilitating voting by Spanish speakers.\textsuperscript{81} With the complaint, the government filed an agreed and proposed consent decree.\textsuperscript{82} Judge Kenneth Hoyt signed the decree on April 13.\textsuperscript{83}

\textit{United States v. Bolivar County} (N.D. Miss. 2:08-cv-33). The Justice Department filed a federal complaint in the Northern District of Mississippi’s Delta Division on February 15, 2008, claiming that Bolivar County failed to provide provisional voters in the 2006 general election with free access to information on whether their votes were counted.\textsuperscript{84} The Department filed with its complaint a stipulated and proposed consent de-

Judge Neal Biggers signed the consent decree on February 27.

United States v. Galveston County (S.D. Tex. 3:07-cv-377). In the Southern District of Texas’s Galveston Division, the Justice Department filed a federal complaint against Galveston County on July 16, 2007, claiming violations of (1) HAVA by failing to properly provide provisional ballots in the 2006 general election and (2) the Voting Rights Act by insufficiently accommodating Spanish-speaking voters. With its complaint, the Department filed a stipulated and proposed consent decree. Judge John D. Rainey signed the decree on July 20.

United States v. Cibola County (D.N.M. 1:93-cv-1134). A 1993 action by the Justice Department under the Voting Rights Act resulted in an order that Cibola County in New Mexico improve its accommodation of voters speaking Keresan and Navajo. On January 31, 2007, the Department filed an amended complaint and a settlement agreement expanding the case to include claims under HAVA with respect to adequate provision of provisional ballots and claims under the National Voter Registration Act.

United States v. Cochise County (D. Ariz. 4:06-cv-304). The Justice Department filed a federal complaint against Cochise County, Arizona, on June 16, 2006, alleging violation of HAVA by failing to post adequate information at the polls and violation of the Voting Rights Act by failing to adequately accommodate Spanish-speaking voters. With its complaint, the Department filed a proposed consent decree, which a three-judge court approved on October 12.

United States v. Westchester County (S.D.NY 7:05-cv-650). The Justice Department filed a federal complaint against Westchester County in the Southern District of New York’s White Plains courthouse on January 19, 2005, charging that the county failed to provide information at polls required by section 302 of HAVA and failed to accommodate Spanish-speaking voters in violation of the Voting Rights Act. A three-judge court signed the consent decree on July 14. In light of an extension of relevant provisions of the Voting Rights Act until 2032, the Justice Department moved to extend the consent decree until the end of 2008, and the court agreed on December 31 to do that.

United States v. San Benito County (N.D. Cal. 5:04-cv-2056). The Justice Department filed a federal complaint in San Jose, California, on May 26, 2004, against San Benito County for (1) not providing provisional voters with sufficient information about how to find out if their ballots were counted, (2) not providing provisional voters with reasons if their ballots were not counted, both in violation of HAVA section 302, and

(3) failing to adequately accommodate Spanish-speaking voters, in violation of the Voting Rights Act.\textsuperscript{99} With its complaint, the Department filed a stipulated and proposed consent decree.\textsuperscript{100} A three-judge court signed the consent decree on October 1.\textsuperscript{101}

\textit{Section 303 Violations}

Alleged violations of section 303 included failure to comply with requirements for a statewide voter registration database and failure to require identification from certain first-time voters who registered by mail.

\textit{United States v. Alabama (M.D. Ala. 2: 06-cv-392).} Five weeks before Alabama’s June 6, 2006, primary election, the Justice Department filed an action alleging Alabama’s violation of HAVA section 303 by not maintaining an adequate statewide voter registration list and not updating its mail-in voter registration forms to ensure identification matching for first-time voters.\textsuperscript{102} With its complaint, the Department filed a preliminary injunction motion.\textsuperscript{103} On May 30, Judge W. Keith Watkins issued a preliminary injunction requiring presentation of a compliance plan by June 29 for review at a July 20 hearing.\textsuperscript{104} At the hearing, Judge Watkins ordered compliance by August 31, 2007, in time for the 2008 primary.\textsuperscript{105} Because Alabama’s secretary of state said that she could not ensure compliance with the court’s order, Judge Watkins appointed Alabama’s governor

Linares signed that day. \(^{110}\)

United States v. New York (N.D.N.Y. 1:06-cv-263). As discussed supra under Section 301 Violations, the district court continues to monitor New York’s compliance with HAVA section 303(a) concerning statewide voter registration lists. \(^{111}\)

Private Enforcement of HAVA in Federal Courts

Although HAVA’s section 401 assigns enforcement responsibility to the Justice Department, private, nongovernmental litigants have also brought cases in federal courts seeking enforcement of HAVA’s requirements, in part because Congress did not give the EAC the authority to promulgate regulations to clarify HAVA’s provisions.

Plaintiffs have pursued causes of action under (1) the civil rights section 1983 of the U.S. Code’s title 42 and (2) the Supremacy Clause of the U.S. Constitution. In addition to the question of whether the plaintiff has standing, ripeness is often an important issue for the court.

The Help America Vote Act

Title I

The court of appeals for the Second Circuit affirmed a district court’s decision that private plaintiffs did not have a private right of action under HAVA’s title I.

Loeber v. Spargo (N.D.N.Y. 1:04-cv-1193). In a pro se complaint, 11 plaintiffs characterizing themselves as “Ad Hoc New York State Citizens for Constitutional Legislative Redistricting,” filed an October 15, 2004, challenge to the 2002 districting of New York’s legislature. Among the plaintiffs’ claims was one that the allocation of HAVA funds to New York was improper because it was based on the voting age population instead of the citizen voting age population. Judge Lawrence E. Kahn determined that the plaintiffs did not have standing to challenge the funding scheme, and the court of appeals affirmed.

Section 1983

The Voting Rights Act and the National Voter Registration Act explicitly provide for private rights of action, but HAVA does not. Section 1983, however, provides a right of action against persons acting under the color of state law for redress of a “deprivation of any rights, privileges, or immunities secured by the Constitution and laws.”

There are two major limitations on a section 1983 right of action. First, the statutory scheme must not expressly or implicitly preclude the action. The federal statute relied on must confer an individual right. The second limitation has proved to be the more challenging for HAVA plaintiffs.

Second, the federal statute relied on provisions for provisional ballots create unambiguous rights for voters enforceable by section 1983. A district court in another circuit came to the same conclusion.

Because HAVA’s provisions for provisional ballots are enforceable through section 1983, courts may award attorney fees to successful plaintiffs.

Supremacy Clause

Another basis for private actions to enforce HAVA is the Constitution’s Supremacy Clause:

> This Constitution, and the Laws of the United States which shall be made in Pursuance thereof; and all Treaties made, or which shall be made, under the Authority of the United States, shall be the supreme Law of the Land; and the Judges in every State shall be bound thereby, any Thing in the Constitution or Laws of any State to the Contrary notwithstanding.

When the plaintiff brings suit under the Supremacy Clause, the court applies preemption analysis to determine whether Congress may displace, or preempt, state law whenever it intends to and is acting within the scope of its constitutionally enumerated powers. HAVA does not expressly preempt state law, and it clearly does not occupy the field of election law, so

123. U.S. Const. art. VI, cl. 2.
the applicable preemption analysis for HAVA cases is conflict preemption. Courts have found the following HAVA provisions enforceable in private lawsuits under the Supremacy Clause:

- provisional-ballot requirements
- fail-safe provisions for first-time voters who register by mail

Ripeness

Ripeness is an essential requirement of any lawsuit. In the HAVA context, ripeness was more of an issue in advance of HAVA’s deadlines.

American Association of People with Disabilities v. Shelley (C.D. Cal. 2:04-cv-1526) and Benavidez v. Shelley (C.D. Cal. 2:04-cv-3318). The district court ruled that an action brought in 2004 by and on behalf of disabled voters pursuant to HAVA’s requirement that election procedures accommodate disabled voters was not ripe, because HAVA’s requirements for disabled voters would not be in effect until 2006. Judge Florence-Marie Cooper denied the plaintiffs’ motion for immediate injunctive relief on other grounds as well. After difficulties emerged in the March 2004 California primary elections, California’s secretary of state, in a controversial decision, decertified electronic voting machines in several counties for the 2004 general election, citing security and technological concerns. Disabled voters, their advocates, and Riverside County filed 127. Id. at 1125–32.

ultimately unsuccessful federal actions challenging the secretary’s decertification.\textsuperscript{129}

\textit{Laches}

Election litigation always has some time pressure, because there is always another election on the horizon. In some cases, the time pressure is measured in hours or days. Courts will sometimes take into account whether the action has been filed early enough to permit a reasonable remedy.

\textit{Lucas County Democratic Party v. Blackwell} (N.D. Ohio 3:04-cv-7646). Eighteen days before the 2004 general election, the Democratic Parties of Ohio and Lucas County filed a federal challenge to instructions provided by Ohio’s secretary of state to county boards of elections, alleging that they violated HAVA with respect to a requirement for provision of a driver’s license number or the last four digits of a Social Security number when registering to vote at state offices.\textsuperscript{130} \textit{Sua sponte}, Judge James G. Carr denied the plaintiffs a preliminary injunction because “there is not enough time between now and the election to develop the evidentiary record necessary to determine if the plaintiffs are likely to succeed on the merits of their claim” and the plaintiffs did not explain why they waited until so long after the secretary issued his instructions and so close to the 2004 ele-tion to file the suit.\textsuperscript{131} The plaintiffs dismissed their action voluntarily in December.\textsuperscript{132}

\textit{Section 301}

Courts have not found private rights of action to enforce HAVA’s requirements for voting systems.

\textit{Paralyzed Veterans of America v. McPherson (N.D. Cal. 4:06-cv-4670)}. A district court determined that HAVA’s requirement that voting systems be accessible to persons with disabilities was not enforceable by voters.\textsuperscript{133} Finding the issue a “close, difficult question,” Judge Sandra Brown Armstrong answered the following question in favor of the defendants: “whether the statute unambiguously confers a federal right, not merely a benefit to a particular class.”\textsuperscript{134} The suit was brought on August 1, 2006, by five disabled voters and three organizations supporting disabled persons, claiming both constitutional and HAVA grounds for relief.\textsuperscript{135} On October 31, 2008, the plaintiffs notified the court that the last remaining issues of litigation had been settled.\textsuperscript{136}

\textit{Taylor v. Onorato (W.D. Pa. 2:06-cv-481)}. Judge Gary L. Lancaster determined that HAVA’s requirements for voting systems are not enforceable in private actions.\textsuperscript{137} “[A] private right of action will only be recognized for violations of federal rights not simply federal laws.”

Section 302

HAVA’s section 302 mandates that a “registered voter in the jurisdiction in which the individual desires to vote” be “permitted to cast a provisional ballot.” Several courts have determined that “jurisdiction” means precinct. If a voter arrives at a correct location and is directed to or given a ballot for the wrong precinct by a poll worker, however, the court of appeals for the Sixth Circuit has determined that the voter should not be disenfranchised because of the poll worker’s error.

An effective remedy may require the naming of the correct election officials as defendants.

Service Employees International Union v. Husted (6th Cir. 12–3916 and 12–4069; S.D. Ohio 2:12-cv-562). The court of appeals for the Sixth Circuit affirmed an injunction issued by the district court requiring that provisional ballots cast in the wrong precinct because of poll-worker error be counted, so long as the ballots are cast in a correct location.

Janis v. Nelson (D.S.D. 5:09-cv-5019). Judge Karen E. Schreier determined that state officials were not liable for HAVA’s requirement that voters be offered provisional ballots if there is uncertainty about their eligibility to vote, because this HAVA requirement is directed in section 302(a)(1) to election officials at polling places. The plaintiffs’ complaint was that South Dakota had wrongfully denied them the right to vote in 2008 elections; they alleged that although they were convicted felons they had been sentenced only to probation and so their voting rights should not have been abridged. The case was resolved by a settlement agreement.

Broyles v. Texas (5th Cir. 09-20290; S.D. Tex. 4:08-cv-2320). Judge Lee H. Rosenthal determined, “There is no basis to conclude that the provisions of [HAVA’s provisional ballot requirements] apply to voting that does not involve elections for Federal office.” In an appeal on other grounds, the court of appeals for the Fifth Circuit affirmed. The HAVA claim was one of many brought to challenge a local election to establish a new municipality.

Florida State Conference of the NAACP v. Browning (11th Cir. 07-15932; N.D. Fla. 4:07-cv-402). The court of appeals for the Eleventh Circuit ruled that HAVA did not require Florida to count provisional ballots cast by voters whose voter registrations were not valid because of a mismatch between the identification number provided by the voter at registration and the state’s reference database, even if the mismatch arose from state error.

White v. Blackwell (N.D. Ohio 3:04-cv-7689). Judge David A. Katz determined that Ohio was violating HAVA in 2004 and 2005 elections by denying provisional ballots to voters who had... applied for but who had not cast absentee ballots, even if the voters never received the absentee ballots.\(^{150}\)

_Sandusky County Democratic Party v. Blackwell (6th Cir. 04-4265 and 04-4266; N.D. Ohio 3:04-cv-7582), Bay County Democratic Party v. Land (6th Cir. 04-2307; E.D. Mich. 1:04-cv-10257), and Michigan State Conference of NAACP Branches v. Land (6th Cir. 04-2318; E.D. Mich. 1:04-cv-10267)._ The court of appeals reversed a district court order requiring Ohio to count provisional ballots so long as they were cast in the right county.

[W]e hold that ballots cast in a precinct where the voter does not reside and which would be invalid under state law for that reason are not required by HAVA to be considered legal votes.

To hold otherwise would interpret Congress’s reasonably clear procedural language to mean that political parties would now be authorized to marshal their supporters at the last minute from shopping centers, office buildings, or factories, and urge them to vote at whatever polling place happened to be handy, all in the effort to turn out every last vote regardless of state law and historical practice. We do not believe that Congress quietly worked such a revolution in America’s voting procedures, and we will not order it.\(^{151}\)

On the same day, the court of appeals also reversed a district court order that provisional ballots in Michigan be counted so long as they are cast in the correct city, village, or township.\(^{152}\)

_Florida Democratic Party v. Hood (N.D. Fla. 4:04-cv-395)._ Judge Robert L. Hinkle determined that Florida’s requirement that provisional ballots must be cast in the correct precinct to be counted did not violate HAVA. Florida’s Democratic Party had standing to bring the action on behalf of its members, but the court determined the core claim to be without merit.

Hawkins v. Blunt (W.D. Mo. 2:04-cv-4177). Judge Richard E. Dorr determined that a Missouri statute requiring election officials to refer a voter who arrives at the wrong polling location to the correct location or a central location was not preempted by HAVA. After primary elections in August 2004, three Kansas City voters who voted at incorrect locations sued to have their provisional ballots counted. Following the filing of their complaint, the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners agreed to count their ballots, and the ballots of others similarly situated, because there was no evidence that the voters had been directed to correct polling locations, as required by Missouri’s statute.

Some federal actions have challenged state laws and policies as in violation of HAVA’s specifications for statewide voter registration databases. Whether the states have violated HAVA has required careful conflict preemption analyses.

Janis v. Nelson (D.S.D. 5:09-cv-5019). In an action brought by convicted felons who claimed that they were wrongfully denied the right to vote in 2008 elections because they were sentenced only to probation, the district court rejected the state defendants’ argument that only local officials are liable for \textit{ACLU of New Mexico v. Chavez (10th Cir. 07-2067; D.N.M. 1:05-cv-1136)}. The court of appeals for the Tenth Circuit reversed an injunction against a requirement of photo identification for voting in municipal elections in Albuquerque, because HAVA only applies to elections for federal offices.\textsuperscript{159} The court of appeals also concluded that the district court’s injunction on equal protection grounds was in conflict with the Supreme Court’s subsequent decision in \textit{Crawford v. Marion County Election Board}.\textsuperscript{160}

\textit{Ohio Republican Party v. Brunner (U.S. 08A332; 6th Cir. 08-4322; S.D. Ohio 2:08-cv-913)}. In a one-paragraph decision, the Supreme Court vacated a temporary restraining order issued by a district judge to enforce HAVA, concluding that the plaintiffs “are not sufficiently likely to prevail on the question whether Congress has authorized the District Court to enforce § 303 in an action brought by a private litigant to justify the issuance of a TRO.”\textsuperscript{161} In an action brought by the Ohio Republican Party and a voter, Judge George C. Smith determined that Ohio’s secretary of state was not ensuring that all new voter registrations were being matched to driver’s license and Social Security databases before the voters’ absentee ballots were counted, and so Judge Smith issued a temporary restraining order, not quite four weeks before the general election, mandating compliance with HAVA.\textsuperscript{162} A panel of the court of appeals stayed Judge Smith’s order, but the full court of appeals vacated the panel’s stay, and then the Supreme Court overruled the court of appeals.

_Florida State Conference of the NAACP v. Browning (11th Cir. 07-15932; N.D. Fla. 4:07-cv-402)._ The court of appeals for the Eleventh Circuit ruled that a Florida statute requiring the state to match a voter’s driver’s license number or Social Security number to the corresponding database before a voter registration became final was not preempted by HAVA. HAVA’s section 303(a)(5)(A) provides that an application for voter registration include (1) the voter’s driver’s license number, (2) the last four digits of the voter’s Social Security number if the voter does not have a driver’s license, or (3) a unique voter registration number provided by the state if the voter has neither a driver’s license nor a Social Security number. Three advocacy organizations filed a federal complaint and sought an injunction against a Florida statute that makes voter registration contingent on the state’s matching the number provided by the voter to the relevant database. Finding that “[a]s a result of natural and expected human errors in data entry and possible computer glitches in the matching process, this law has resulted in more than 14,000 otherwise eligible voters being kept off the voter rolls,” the district court issued a preliminary injunction against the statute. The court of appeals reversed the injunction: “Assuming that plaintiffs are right that section 303(a)(5) of HAVA does not impose matching as a requirement of voter registration, it also does not seem to prohibit states from implementing it.”\textsuperscript{169}

On remand, the district court determined that the statute was not unconstitutional.\textsuperscript{170} Remaining claims were dismissed as settled.\textsuperscript{171}

\textit{Washington Association of Churches} (W.D. Wash. 2:06-cv-726). The district court determined that a Washington statute requiring that a new voter’s identification be matched to either the Social Security Administration database or the Department of Licensing database before the person can be registered to vote was preempted by HAVA, which required matching only “as an administrative safeguard for storing and managing the official list of registered voters, and not as a restriction on voter eligibility.”\textsuperscript{172} Otherwise HAVA would not provide for the assignment of unique identification numbers to voters who do not have Social Security or driver’s license numbers.\textsuperscript{173} At the litigation’s conclusion, the parties stipulated to an award of $575,000 in attorney fees.\textsuperscript{174}

\textit{League of Women Voters v. Blackwell} (N.D. Ohio 3:04-cv-7622). Judge James G. Carr determined that a directive by Ohio’s secretary of state was not in conflict with HAVA: first-time voters who registered by mail must provide at the polling place documentary identification, their driver’s license number, or the last four digits of their Social Security number.\textsuperscript{175}

Enforcement of HAVA in State Courts

Presented here are summaries of seven cases in which state courts interpreted HAVA. In one case, Arizona’s court of appeals found that Arizona is more generous than federal courts in finding private rights of action to enforce HAVA’s provisions. In another case, a Colorado trial court came to the same decision as the prevailing federal court view: HAVA does not provide voters with a right to cast provisional ballots in precincts other than their own.

The primary question in the state court cases was whether HAVA preempted state laws and policies. Pennsylvania’s supreme court determined that HAVA’s deadline for states to establish HAVA-compliant voting systems preempted a statute that required a referendum on changes to voting systems. On the other hand, state courts determined that HAVA does not preempt (1) counting hand-tallied votes according to an intent-of-the-voter standard, (2) allowing 17-year-olds to submit voter registration applications that the state does not process until they are eligible to vote, or (3) a state requirement that signers of a petition to place a name on the ballot provide their correct town or city of residence.

A trial court in New York determined that federal HAVA litigation did not preempt a state court action challenging the state’s implementation of HAVA as a violation of the state’s constitution.\textsuperscript{182}

\textit{County of Nassau v. New York (N.Y. Sup. Ct. Albany 7193-10)}. New York’s supreme court for Albany County held that a county’s suit in state court challenging the state’s implementation of HAVA as a violation of the state’s constitution was not preempted by federal litigation over the state’s compliance with HAVA.\textsuperscript{183} Nassau County was unsuccessful in intervening in the federal case to protect its use of lever voting machines.\textsuperscript{184} In affirming an injunction against Nassau in the federal action, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit stated, “Nassau has commenced litigation in state court challenging the constitutionality of [New York’s Election Reform and Modernization Act of 2005] under the constitution of New York State. Nothing is preventing Nassau from pursuing that litigation.”\textsuperscript{185} The state court determined, however, that the county did not have the legal capacity to pursue its action against the state.\textsuperscript{186}

\textit{Edelman v. Washington (Wash. Ct. App. 399954; Wash. Sup. Ct. Thurston 08-2-02317-3)}. Washington’s court of appeals held that it was not a violation of HAVA for Washington’s election officials to accept mail-in voter registrations from 17-year-olds and hold them for processing until the voters turned 18.\textsuperscript{187} A researcher for the think tank Evergreen Freedom Foundation challenged the Washington policy as, on the one hand, adding registrations to the state database before the registrations were valid and, on the other hand, not processing the registrations expeditiously as required by HAVA. An administrative law judge, the superior court, and the court of appeals all agreed that the registrations were promptly added to the state database, but they were not added as completed registrations until the voters became eligible. The court of appeals also concluded that omission from the registration form of an instruction not to complete the form to persons not presently eligible to register did not violate HAVA because Washington relied on advice from the HAVA-created Election Assistance Commission.

Chavez v. Brewer (Ariz. App. 1 CA-CV 06-0575; Ariz. Sup. Ct. Maricopa CV2006-007000). Arizona’s court of appeals held that although HAVA may not afford voters a private right of action in federal courts respecting a county’s selection of voting equipment, Arizona voters have a private right of action in Arizona’s state courts pursuant to Arizona statutes enacted in compliance with HAVA, because Arizona courts are more generous than federal courts in finding private rights of action whenever the focus of the statute is protecting individual rights.

New Mexico ex rel. League of Women Voters v. Herrera (N.M.). One week before the 2008 general election, New Mexico’s supreme court issued a writ of mandamus overturning New Mexico’s attorney general’s advisory letter nullifying a statutory provision that hand-tallied votes be counted so long as the intent of the voter is clearly discernible. The attorney general had determined\(^{193}\) that a subjective intent-of-the-voter standard conflicted with the U.S. Supreme Court’s decision in \textit{Bush v. Gore}\(^{194}\) and with a HAVA requirement: “Each State shall adopt uniform and nondiscriminatory standards that define what constitutes a vote and what will be counted as a vote for each category of voting system used in the State.”\(^{195}\) New Mexico’s supreme court determined that the statutory intent-of-the-voter standard “provides sufficient statewide uniformity to comply with both \textit{Bush v. Gore} and the plain language of HAVA.”\(^{196}\)

\textit{Stark v. Kelleher (N.Y. App. Div. 3d Dep’t 501016).} The appellate division of New York’s supreme court rejected an argument by an unsuccessful petitioner for a ballot that HAVA’s establishment of voter registration databases nullified local requirements that signers of ballot petitions include their correct town or city.\(^{197}\)

\textit{Kuznik v. Westmoreland County Board of Commissioners (Pa. 18 MAP 2006; Pa. Commw. Ct. 18 MD 2006; Pa. C.P. voting machines by referendum. Voters in Westmoreland County challenged this decision in the county court of common pleas, and the action was subsequently transferred to the commonwealth court. The commonwealth court judge held that HAVA and the referendum requirement were not in conflict, but the election would have to use lever machines for state matters and paper ballots for federal matters. The supreme court held that this result violated unitary voting; instead, HAVA preempted the statutory requirement for a referendum on electronic voting.

Colorado Common Cause v. Davidson (Colo. Dist. Ct. Denver 04CV7709). Colorado’s trial court upheld two statutory provisions and invalidated one in response to a complaint that argued each violated HAVA. (1) A state requirement that provisional ballots be cast in the correct precinct did not violate HAVA: “Congress could never have intended by the use of [the] single word [‘jurisdiction’] to displace the precinct-based voting system that has been in place in Colorado since its inception.” (2) A rule that provisional ballots would not be counted if the voter applied for an absentee ballot, even if the voter never cast or even received the absentee ballot, did violate HAVA. (3) Expanding voter identification requirements to all voters and not just first-time voters who registered by mail did not violate HAVA. The defendants decided not to appeal the judge’s ruling.

Conclusion

When HAVA was new, the Justice Department enforced its provisions with a few federal court cases, most of which were resolved by settlement. Key issues were compliance with HAVA by the states’ registration databases and voting equipment.

A key issue in private enforcement of HAVA is voters’ entitlement to cast provisional ballots and whether those ballots will be counted. An important legal question is whether voters must cast provisional ballots in the correct precinct. Federal courts appear to have settled on a determination that HAVA does not relieve voters from casting their votes in the correct precinct, but principles of fairness may relieve voters from disenfranchisement resulting from misdirection by poll workers.

A second key issue in private cases is the extent to which HAVA preempts state laws and policies respecting registration databases, and these cases require careful conflict preemption analyses.

§ 15302. Replacement of Punch Card or Lever Voting Machines

(a) Establishment of Program

(1) In General
Not later than 45 days after October 29, 2002, the Administrator shall establish a program under which the Administrator shall make a payment to each State eligible under subsection (b) of this section in which a precinct within that State used a punch card voting system or a lever voting system to administer the regularly scheduled general election for Federal office held in November 2000 (in this section referred to as a “qualifying precinct”).

38
The Help America Vote Act

(2) Use of Funds
A State shall use the funds provided under a payment under this section (either directly or as reimbursement, including as reimbursement for costs incurred on or after January 1, 2001, under multiyear contracts) to replace punch card voting systems or lever voting systems (as the case may be) in qualifying precincts within that State with a voting system (by purchase, lease, or such other arrangement as may be appropriate) that—

(C) meets the requirements of section 15481 of this title.

(3) Deadline

(A) In General

About the Federal Judicial Center
The Federal Judicial Center is the research and education agency of the federal judicial system. It was established by Congress in 1967 (28 U.S.C. §§ 620–629), on the recommendation of the Judicial Conference of the United States.

By statute, the Chief Justice of the United States chairs the Center’s Board, which also includes the director of the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts and seven judges elected by the Judicial Conference.

The organization of the Center reflects its primary statutory mandates. The Education Division plans and produces education and training programs for judges and court staff, including satellite broadcasts, video programs, publications, curriculum packages for in-court training, and Web-based programs and resources. The Research Division examines and evaluates current and alternative federal court practices and policies. This research assists Judicial Conference committees, who request most Center research, in developing policy recommendations. The Center’s research also contributes substantially to its educational programs. The two divisions work closely with two units of the Director’s Office—the Information Technology Office and Communications Policy & Design Office—in using print, broadcast, and on-line media to deliver education and training and to disseminate the results of Center research. The Federal Judicial History Office helps courts and others study and preserve federal judicial history. The International Judicial Relations Office provides information to judicial and legal officials from foreign countries and assesses how to inform federal judicial personnel of developments in international law and other court systems that may affect their work.
