March 24, 1995
(Update of March 1, 1994, Initial Report)

This report is an update to the March 1, 1994, initial report on the federal district courts' responses to the 1993 amendments to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 26. The heart of this report, as in the initial report, is the attached table, which is based on the courts' local rules, general orders, and CJRA plans and which describes for each court which of five key provisions of Rule 26 are in effect.

The four sections below briefly describe the background to this report; summarize the amendments to Rule 26; note how the attached table may be read; and identify some patterns in the courts' responses to amended Rule 26.

Background to this Report

On December 1, 1993, amendments to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure went into effect. Among these, amendments to Rule 26 provide for three types of self-executing disclosure: initial disclosure; expert disclosure; and pretrial disclosure. The amended rule also provides for deferral of formal discovery until parties have met to discuss and plan discovery and to make or arrange for the exchange of disclosures.

The proposed amendments to Rule 26 generated substantial controversy and an effort, ultimately unsuccessful, to persuade Congress to remove the proposed changes from the rule. The rule itself permits each court by local rule or order to exempt all cases or categories of cases from some of the rule's requirements and also permits parties to stipulate out of some of the requirements.

Since the effective date of the amendments, interest has been high in the courts' responses to amended Rule 26. How many have "opted out" of the rule's requirements, as the practice has come to be known? To answer this question, I distributed an initial report on March 1, 1994. The report showed, roughly, that a third of the courts had implemented Rule 26, a third had opted out (some because local rules or the CJRA plan provided for disclosure), and a third had not made a final decision. Now that most courts have reached a decision regarding implementation of Rule 26, the present report is provided.

Description of Selected Amendments to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 26

This report describes the district courts' responses to selected subsections of Fed. R. Civ. P. 26, specifically 26(a)(1)-(3), 26(d), and 26(f). These subsections are summarized below.

Rule 26(a)(1), Initial Disclosure. Except as otherwise stipulated or as directed by order or local rule, a party must provide, without awaiting a discovery request, the following information at or within ten days of the Rule 26(f) meeting of counsel:

- name, address, and telephone number of all persons likely to have discoverable information relevant to disputed facts alleged with particularity in the pleadings, with identification of the subjects of the information;
- a copy or description by category and location of all documents, data compilations, and tangible things in the party's possession, custody, or control that are relevant to disputed facts alleged with particularity in the pleadings;
- computation of damages claimed, with supporting documentation to be available for copying or inspection; and
- insurance policies that may satisfy the judgment, to be available for inspection or copying.

Rule 26(a)(2), Expert Disclosure. Parties must disclose the identity of persons who may testify as experts at trial [(a)(2)(A)] and, except as otherwise stipulated or as directed by the court, must provide a written report prepared and signed by the expert [(a)(2)(B)] containing:

- a complete statement of all opinions to be expressed by the expert and the basis and reasons for them;
- the data or other information considered by the expert in forming the opinions;
- exhibits to be used to summarize or support the opinions;
- qualifications of the expert;
- compensation to be paid the expert; and
- a list of cases in which the expert has testified, as an expert, at trial or by deposition in the last four years.

These disclosures must be made at the times and in the sequence directed by the court. In the absence of other directions by the court, disclosure of experts must be made at least 90 days before the case is to be ready for trial or within 30 days of another party's disclosure on the same subject matter when intended only to contradict or rebut that disclosure [(a)(2)(C)]. Note that Rule 26(a)(2) does not include a general opt-out provision and permits exemption from the expert's report only if stipulated by the parties or directed by the court.

Rule 26(a)(3), Pretrial Disclosure. In addition to the disclosures required above, a party must provide the following information about the evidence it may present at trial other than solely for impeachment purposes:

- name, address, and telephone number of each witness, separately identifying those the party expects to call and those it may call if necessary;
- list of witnesses whose testimony is expected to be presented by deposition and, if the deposition was not taken stenographically, a transcript of the pertinent portions; and
- an appropriate identification of each document or other exhibit, including summaries of other evidence, separately identifying those the party expects to offer and those it may offer if necessary.

Unless otherwise directed by the court, these disclosures must be made at least 30 days before trial. Within fourteen days of this disclosure, certain objections [specified in the rule] must be made and if not made, excepting objections under Fed. Rules of Evid. 402 and 403, are waived unless excused by the court for good cause shown. Note that Rule 26(a)(3) does not include an opt-out provision but provides only that the court may alter the timing for pretrial disclosures.

Rule 26(d), Timing and Sequencing of Discovery. The first sentence of Rule 26(d) states that, except when authorized under the federal rules or by local rule, order, or agreement of the parties, a party may not seek discovery from any source before the parties have met and conferred as required by Rule 26(f). The remainder of the rule is unchanged—formal discovery may proceed as under the old rule.

Rule 26(f), Meeting of Counsel and Written Discovery Plan. Except in actions exempted by local rule or when otherwise ordered, parties must meet at least fourteen days before a Rule 16(b) scheduling conference is held or a scheduling order is due to:

- discuss the nature and basis of their claims and defenses and the possibility of settlement;
- make or arrange to make the disclosures required by Rule 26(a)(1); and
- develop a written discovery plan, which must be submitted to the court within 10 days after the meeting. (The rule specifies the type of “views and proposals” that should be included in the discovery plan.)

Using the Attached Table to Understand the Courts’ Responses to FRCivP 26 and the Courts’ Requirements Concerning Disclosure

The attached district-by-district table shows which subsections of the rule are in effect in each district and which are not. The information in the table, which is current as of March 1, 1995, is derived from several sources. In anticipation of or subsequent to promulgation of the amended federal rules, most districts issued orders, notices, or local rule revisions identifying which of the federal rule amendments would take effect in the district. For courts that did not issue written responses, we spoke with the clerk of court or other court staff to obtain information about the court’s disclosure requirements. We also asked each court to review the updated table to confirm the accuracy of our summary.<sup>1</sup>

For districts that decided not to implement one or more of the requirements of Rule 26(a), (d), and (f), we examined the CJRA plan<sup>2</sup> and local rules to see whether either of these has requirements similar to the federal rule. A number of courts, for example, included disclosure provisions in CJRA plans adopted before the federal rules were amended. Some of these courts were reluctant, when the amended federal rules went into effect, to change requirements already established in their districts.

Others who adopted CJRA plans late in 1993 anticipated promulgation of the federal rule amendments and addressed these expected changes in their plans. Thus, for courts opting out of one or more of the federal rule requirements covered by this table, we have tried to indicate whether a similar requirement exists in local rules or CJRA plans. Without this information, it is easy to underestimate the number of courts with disclosure provisions.

Short summaries of technical information such as rules can do violence to the nuances of that information. This table is no different. It provides only limited information, for example, about the types of cases or information subject to disclosure requirements. It also does not reveal the extent to which individual judges require disclosure. In using the table, please read the footnotes carefully, as they provide important definitions and cautions regarding the information in the table. In general, the table is best used as an overview of the courts' responses to amended Rule 26 and their disclosure requirements. Users who need to know specific requirements—for example, attorneys handling cases in federal court—should not rely on the table or cite it as legal authority.

A Summary Description of the Courts' Responses to Amended FRCP 26 and of the Courts' Disclosure Requirements

While the attached district-by-district table provides detailed information about the courts' responses to Fed. R. Civ. P. 26, Table 1 (next page) provides a numerical summary of these responses.<sup>3</sup> Table 1 shows that Rule 26(a)(1), which requires initial disclosure, has been more frequently rejected than have the other subdivisions of Rule 26. Altogether, just under half the districts have implemented 26(a)(1), and just over half have not. Of the 49 districts that have not implemented the rule, five require initial disclosure through local rules, orders, or the CJRA plan, and fifteen specifically give individual judges authority to require initial disclosure. In only twenty-eight courts, then, are all cases routinely exempt from any rules—federal or local—requiring initial disclosure. The table also shows that six courts have implemented Rule 26(a)(1) with a significant revision. Typically the revision excludes either the requirement to disclose adverse material or the requirement to submit a computation of damages.

Although Rule 26 does not include provisions for opting out of expert disclosure (a)(2) and pretrial disclosure (a)(3), Table 1 shows that about a quarter of the districts have interpreted the federal rule that way. Still, the great majority require expert and pretrial disclosure—74 and 72 courts, respectively. Of these, seven have made a significant revision in their implementation of 26(a)(2); the most common revision is to exempt parties from submitting the experts' signed report.

Two-thirds of the districts have implemented 26(f), which requires parties to meet and confer to prepare a discovery plan. Of the third that have not implemented this subsection, six permit individual judges to order it in the specific case. Somewhat fewer courts—but still more than half—require parties to postpone discovery until they have held the 26(f) meeting.

In general, Table 1 suggests that classifying courts as “opting in” and “opting out” of Rule 26’s requirements oversimplifies their responses to the amended rule and may understate the extent to which parties will encounter disclosure requirements in federal courts. Rule 26(a)(1), for example, has been implemented in only half the districts, but those who practice in federal district court may encounter initial disclosure requirements in an additional twenty-one courts either upon order of the judge or through other local provisions for disclosure.

Table 1
Number of Courts in Which Specified Subsections of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 26 Are or Are Not in Effect

Nature of Court’s Response	Rule 26(a)(1)	Rule 26(a)(2)	Rule 26(a)(3)	Rule 26(d)	Rule 26(f)
In effect	45	74	72	54	62
In effect with a significant revision	6	7	1	0	0
Not in effect	49	20	22	39	31
But substantially provided for by CJRA plan or local rule	5	4	2	4	2
But the judge may order in the specific case	15	3	3	4	6
But is in effect for limited case types	1	1	1	0	1

Focusing again on Rule 26(a)(1), we see from Table 2 (next page) that six of the fourteen largest districts have implemented this subsection of the rule. Two additional courts require initial disclosure by local rule or the CJRA plan.

Another four have declined to adopt initial disclosure requirements but authorize individual judges to order it in specific cases, while two have declined altogether to implement any initial disclosure requirements.

Table 2

Implementation of Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 26(a)(1) in the Fourteen Largest District Courts***

Court has implemented FRCivP 26(a)(1)	6
Local rule or CJRA plan requires initial disclosure	2
26(a)(1) is not in effect unless ordered by judge	4
26(a)(1) is not in effect	2

* Courts with twelve or more judgeships

In sum, compared to a year ago, the number of courts requiring initial disclosure has increased somewhat, including an increase in the number of large courts requiring initial disclosure. There is also greater stability in the Rule 26 picture now, in the sense that most courts have reached a decision regarding implementation of the rule. As more experience is gained with the rule, this picture may, of course, change.

<sup>2</sup> The Civil Justice Reform Act of 1990 (28 U.S.C. §§ 471-482) requires each federal district court to adopt a cost and delay reduction plan by December 1, 1993. All courts have adopted a CJRA plan.

<sup>3</sup> Note that in a few instances a court's status is ambiguous and the court is not included in the tally for Table 1; therefore the numbers do not add to 94 in every column. Note, too, that considerable judgment must be used in classifying some courts; others might assign specific courts to classifications different from ours.

- 1 The information in the table, which is current through March 1, 1995, is derived from orders and notices issued by the courts in anticipation of or subsequent to the federal rule amendments; from local rules; from CJRA plans; and from clerks of court or other court staff. See the introduction to these tables for a fuller discussion of the sources. The table should not be cited as legal authority or substituted for a careful examination of federal rules or local rules, orders, and Civil Justice Reform Act plans. Julie Hong and Melissa Pecherski contributed greatly to the preparation of this table; I appreciate their assistance.
- 2 Columns 6 and 9 identify local rule or CJRA plan requirements that may apply in courts that have elected to exempt cases from some or all of the disclosure provisions of Rule 26(a), (d), or (f). Some of these courts have requirements similar to the federal rule, while others require much more limited disclosure or require none but permit judges to order it in the specific case. Where the entry says “similar to the federal rule”, the local rule may be similar to an early version of the federal rule (“bears significantly on”) or to the final version (“alleged with particularity”). Though similar, the local rule may differ in its particulars—e.g., the timing of disclosure—but in general “similar” signifies that the court embraces the idea of self-executing disclosure and requires it in some form.
- 3 “Not in effect” means that cases filed in these courts are exempt from the requirements of the federal rule subdivision identified at the head of the columns. In many courts, however, individual judges may require parties to follow the federal rule requirements, or local rules or CJRA plans may provide for some type of disclosure (see columns 6 and 9).
- 4 “In effect” means that cases filed in these courts are subject to the requirements of the federal rule. Where the federal rule is in effect, the court may nonetheless use local rules or orders to alter the effect of the federal rule—e.g., by exempting such case types as habeas corpus, social security, and bankruptcy; setting different time frames for disclosure; or permitting individual judges to opt out. Local rules or orders may also establish an effective date later than December 1, 1993 and may specify whether the federal rules apply only to newly filed cases or also to pending cases. Two significant alterations—not requiring documents adverse to one’s case and not requiring damages computations—are noted in the table. Some courts’ orders in response to the federal rule are explicit only in stating which provisions are rejected. When the order does not specifically reject a provision, we assume it is in effect.
- 5 The standing order will become a local rule, without changes, in approximately 90 days.

- 6 Proposed amendments to Local Rules 6 and 9 would put into effect FRCivP 26(a)(1), 26(a)(2)(C), 26(a)(3), 26(d), and 26(f).
- 7 New local rules in April 1995 may exempt certain classes of cases.
- 8 The court's local rules may change in January 1996.
- 9 The court is in the process of re-writing all the local rules, including those covering FRCivP 26.
- 10 By April 1995 the court expects to implement amended local rules, which will include a few very small changes to the current standing order.
- 11 The court may change Local Rule 23.07 to clarify that FRCivP 26(d) is not in effect.
- 12 Still pending is a court decision on implementing disclosure through the local rules, rather than through the current administrative order.
- 13 The court plans to adopt a local rule regarding disclosure.
- 14 On January 1, 1994 the court began a 15 month experimental period implementing amended FRCivP 26. After the experiment ends on March 31, 1995, the court will decide whether to implement the amendments permanently.
- 15 The court does not have a projected date for adoption of new local rules.
